Tribute Wall

“ Many people cannot say they were close to their great aunt and uncle. I, however, along with other cousins, were quite close to our great uncle Donald. He was full of laughter and kindness, and he was supportive and caring. He was a good example to others of a God fearing man, and we loved him so very much. His light no longer shines here, but the memories of his antics and amusing stories will not be forgotten. I recall a particular time when I drew a man fishing off a pier, and although it was not very good, he made me feel like that drawing should hang in a museum. Just one small thing I remember so clearly about him.
